ANNOUNCEMENTS

Call for Papers

The American Journal of Community Psychology invites contributions to a special issue entitled: Community Psychology and the Law. The issue editor will be Ronald Roesch of Simon Fraser University. The issue advisory and editorial review board members are:

Morton Bard, City University of New York.
Jean Ann Linney, University of South Carolina.
John Monahan, University of Virginia.
Michael Nietzel, University of Kentucky.
Julian Rappaport, University of Illinois.
Bruce Dennis Sales, University of Arizona.
Edward Seidman, Bank Street College of Education.
Alex Zautra, Arizona State University.

This special issue will focus on the contributions of community psychology to the study of legal issues and interventions. All aspects of criminal, juvenile, family, and civil law are appropriate. Possible topics are prevention of crime and delinquency; program evaluation of justice interventions; organizational and institutional level changes in the policy and practice of courts, police, and prisons; interventions with or on behalf of victims; community-based alternatives to confinement; statutory/policy analysis; and consultation or advocacy activities. Authors should pay particular attention to a discussion of how their work is based on the values, strategies, and tactics of community psychology. Both conceptual and empirical articles will be considered, although preference will be given to reports of empirical research.

Potential contributors are invited to submit four copies of their manuscripts by March 1, 1986 to the issue editor, Simon Fraser University, Department of Psychology, Burnaby, British Columbia, Canada V5A 1S6. Manuscripts should conform to the editorial guidelines specified in the journal.

Application for Grants-in-Aid

The American Psychology-Law Society/Division 41 of the American Psychological Association offers support for research through its Grants-in-Aid Committee. Awards do not exceed $250.00 and are aimed at supporting novel projects from investigators who might not easily obtain funding from other sources. An application should consist of a short narrative regarding the research purpose and design (3–4 pages) and a budget indicating the amount requested and how it would be spent. Send two copies or direct questions to:
