Supplemental Materials

We Made History: Citizens of 35 Countries Overestimate their Nation's Role in World History

Zaromb, Liu, Páez, Hanke, Putnam, and Roediger

These supplemental materials contain a copy of the survey used in the study (the World History and Identity Survey), along with additional commentary and data (Contributions to World History and Perceptions of Religion, Conceptions of World History, and Contributions to World History and Cultural Regions).

World History and Identity Survey

Below is the World History and Identity Survey (Liu et al., 2012; Hanke et al., 2015) that consists of a series of questions about the importance and evaluation of 40 historical events and figures, conceptions about the overall course of world history and its main message(s), as well as questions about participants' demographic characteristics and attitudes on a variety of contemporary issues. All questionnaires were translated from their original language into the language prevalent in the society of administration and back-translated to ensure correct translation (for details see Liu et al., 2012; Hanke et al., 2015). For the basis of the current report, towards the end of the survey participants were asked to answer the following question: "What contribution do you think the country you are living in has made to world history?" by providing an estimate from 0-100%, whereby 0% indicates that the country made no contribution to world history, and 100% indicates that all contributions came from the country.

World History and Identity Survey

The following questions are about your ideas on history. They are part of a world-wide effort to construct an international inventory of opinions about the importance and evaluation of historical events and people, and how they relate to the present day issues. The questions should take only a few minutes of your time. Participation in this project is entirely voluntary and may be withdrawn at any stage of the questionnaire. Your answers are anonymous and only grouped results will be reported. Completing the questionnaire indicates your consent to participate in this project.

1. Are you? Female Male
2. What is your age?
3. What is/was your major subject at university?
4. What is your Country of Birth:
5. What is your Nation of Citizenship(s)?
6. How many languages do you speak fluently?
7. How many countries have you lived in?
8. How long have you lived in countries outside of this one? years months
9. How important is religion in your life? (please circle a number between 1 and 4 to describe how you feel)
1=not important at all, 2=somewhat important, 3=fairly important, 4=very important
9a. What is your religion (if any)?
10. Are there any ethnic or regional groups you belong to that are important to you?
11. We all belong to many different groups, like ethnic groups, nationalities, religious groups, gender, work, family, etc. Thinking of the various groups that you belong to, which ones are the most important to you?
12. Often, when people talk about political matters they use terms like "conservative/right-wing" or "liberal/ left-wing" to describe their views. How would you describe yourself in these terms? Circle a number between 1 (liberal/left-wing) and 7 (conservative/right-wing) that best describes you: Liberal/left-wing 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 conservative/right-wing
1. If you were going to tell the story of world history, how would you begin?

2. What do you think happened in history that was most important to bring us to the current state of the world?

3. What sort of future do you foresee for the world?

Below is a list of historical events. Please rate the intensity of your positive or negative feelings about each event (on a scale of 1 to 7, with 1=extremely negative, 4=neutral, and 7=extremely positive), and how important you think each event is (on a scale of 1 to 7, with 1=not at all important, 4=fairly important, and 7=extremely important). Please rate all the events, even if you don't know much about them.

Contributions to World History and Perceptions of Religion

Table S1 presents correlations examining the relationship between estimated contributions to world history and perceptions of religion and religious systems. The first two columns report correlations for each country's estimated contributions to world history with the following general questions about religion: 1) "How important is religion in your life?" (1-4), where 1= "not important at all" and 4= "very important"); and 2) "To what extent do you think religion should inspire the ideal political system?" (1-7), where 1= "Not at all" and 1= "As much as possible"). The remaining columns report correlations for each country with ratings of the intensity of affect towards each of the following major world religions: Islam, Hinduism, Buddhism, Judaism, Confucianism, and Christianity (1-7), where 1= "extremely negative" and 1= "extremely positive").

Although the degree of association between estimated contributions to history and perceptions of religion and religious systems varied by country, estimated contributions to world history for the entire data set were significantly, positively correlated with the perceived importance of religion in students' lives (r = .21, p < .01) as well the extent to which individuals thought religion should inspire the ideal political system (r = .19, p < .01), showing that individuals who indicated greater personal and positive political significance to religion give higher estimates of their country's contributions to world history. There were smaller, albeit significant, correlations between estimated contributions to world history and individuals' perceptions of Islam and Christianity (r values of .11 and .14, respectively), which provide some indication that estimates of national contributions to world history may be associated with how much these two major world religions shaped the course of world history.

Conceptions of World History

We also asked whether individuals' estimates of their country's contributions to world history were related to their conceptions about the meanings and lessons of world history. As shown in Table S2, although the degree of association between estimated contributions to history and their conceptions about the meanings and lessons of world history varied by country, estimated contributions to world history for the entire data set were significantly, positively correlated the tendency to view history as being: (1) the result of the operation of objective laws; (2) the result of a superior plan of a power greater than humankind; (3) a march of human society towards economic progress, greater freedom, democracy, equality, and justice; (4) the story of the pain and suffering of humankind; and (5) a story of technological progress and scientific advance. By contrast, individuals who tended to disagree with the view that history is about the rise and fall of societies, gave higher estimates for their country's contributions to world history.

Table S2. Correlations between estimated contributions of participants' countries to world history and their ratings of agreement (1 - 7), with 1 = 1 Strongly disagree to 1 = 1 Strongly Agree, with different conceptions of the meanings and lessons of world history.

Contributions to World History and Cultural Regions

Table S3 presents means and standard deviations of estimated contributions to world history by cultural regions, based on traditional versus secular and survival versus postmaterialism dimensions of values (see Inglehart and Welzel, 2010, for more details). We used Inglehart's national scores of survival / self-expression or post-materialism available from the WVS (Inglehart and Welzel, 2010). The post-materialism concept results from a factor analysis with one pole representing post-materialist values (high subjective wellbeing, not giving importance to hard work, encouraging tolerance, and trusting people), and an opposite pole representing materialist values, with items such as "rejection of different groups," "respect for one's parents," "liking for work," and "women need to have children to fulfill themselves" (Basabe & Ros, 2005). Post-materialistic values refer to expressive individualism. Alternatively, materialism values emphasize a greater desire for fulfillment of material needs (such as security, sustenance, and shelter). Post-materialism correlates strongly negative with collectivistic and high power distance Hofstede's values. Power distance reflects how persons relates to authority and individualism-collectivist is related to relation between person and groups. Power distance express the degree to which the less powerful members of a society accept and expect that power is distributed unequally. Individualism emphasize voluntary relationships with different groups and personal autonomy, while collectivism emphasize duties and loyalty to a few ascribed groups (Basabe & Ros, 2005). Importantly, materialism is one of the core values in the modernization process of societies across the world. Socioeconomic development related to modernization, and particularly industrialization is expected to be related to industrialization, while post industrial societies are related to expressive individualism (Inglehart & Welzel, 2010). As a consequence, highly developed nations are those which tend to endorse post-materialistic values (Basabe & Ros, 2005; Inglehart and Welzel, 2010). Meanings of history conceived as the result of the operation of objective laws, the result of a superior plan of a power greater than humankind, a march of human society towards economic progress, greater freedom, democracy, equality, and justice were strongly endorsed in nations sharing materialistic, collectivistic and traditional values, and these values and social representations of history were associated with a stronger disposition to fight for the nation (Páez, Liu, Bobowik, Basabe & Hanke, 2016). Globally, these results suggest that collective narcissism is related to a strong national political culture and to a more positivistic and stoic view of history – being relatively weak in more post-materialistic and secular national cultures like Protestant Europe.

English speaking nations are Australia, Canada, New Zealand, USA and UK. Protestant Europe nations are Germany, Netherlands, Norway and Switzerland. Catholic Europe nations are Austria, Belgium, Italy, Portugal and Spain. Orthodox and Ex-Communist nations are Bulgaria, Hungary and Russia. Latin American nations are Argentina, Brazil, Colombia, Mexico and Peru. Confucian Asia nations are China, Hong Kong, Japan, Singapore, South Korea and Taiwan. South Asia Nations are Fiji, India, Indonesia and Philippines, and Islamic nations are Malaysia, Tunisia and Pakistan. We conducted an Analysis of Variance (ANOVA), which revealed significant differences between cultural regions, F(7,6177) = 48.30, p < .01, $\eta^2 = .05$; however, these differences between regions only accounted for 5.2% of the total variance.

Table S3. Number of participants, means, and 95% confidence intervals for Percent Contributions to World History by cultural regions

Cultural Region	N	M	95% CI
Protestant Europe	639	18.9	1.6
Latin America	942	30.9	1.5
Confucian Asia	1147	32.2	1.6
English-Speaking Countries	824	32.3	1.8
Catholic Europe	836	32.4	1.6
Ex-Communist Europe	619	37.5	2.3
Islamic Countries	376	39.9	2.7
South Asia	802	42.4	2.0
